2 THE CHAIRMAN: Well, gentlemen, as 3 we have a quorum the meeting will come to order.
4 We will be hearing this morning from Mr. D. W. Rolling
5 of Toronto, who is representing the Retail Merchants 6 Association of Canada. Mr. Rolling?

7 MR. ROLLING: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
8 I want to apologize first that some of our delegation 9 is not here, coming in from out of town. Perhaps 10 traffic delayed them. And to clarify the situation 11 for yourself, Mr. Chairman, and members of the Select 12 Committee, we represent today the Retail Merchants 13 Association of Canada (Ontario) Incorporated and 14 our members are independent businessmen -- large, 15 medium and small. This is representative today of 16 the retailer who is in constant contact with the 17 consumer for the sale of goods either by credit 18 or cash. None of these people are experts, none are 19 other than independent businessmen. I might say, 20 before we begin, that some figures that were given 21 the other day -- one in particular by myself -- was 22 the total retail business done in Canada and we have 23 now secured a breakdown of those figures to show 24 what is we consider the pure retail figures and the 25 figures that I gave you the other day included such 26 things as the sale of alcoholic beverages, garages 27 and filling stations, lumber and building materials, 28 restaurants, fuel dealers and, of course, miscellaneous.
29 We think that these figures will be of assistance to 30 the Committee and to qualify this further reference

1 books that we have used -- I prepared it in the last 2 two days -- have been requested and I am glad to 3 state that all those reference books will be made
4 available to yourself and the Select Committee on a 5 loan basis for an indefinite period.

6 This is a breakdown of the figures
7 from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for 1962.

8 Also, Mr. Chairman, I have two 9 charts that I will make available to the Committee.
10 The estimated retail chain and independent by kinds 11 of business in Canada and Ontario. These are broken 12 down to grocery, general store and department store
13 and they are reasonably late figures from the Bureau 14 of Statistics. Also an estimate of retail trade by 15 Provinces and kinds of business which points out the 16 Province of Ontario. The sources of this information 17 are at the bottom of the charts.

18 MR. MACDONALD: Mr. Chairman, may I
19 ask about the 18 billion figure we got a day or so 20 ago --

21 MR. ROLLING: That is the last figure, 22 Mr. MacDonald, by the Department of Statistics for 23 the year 1963.

24 MR. MACDONALD: In other words a 25 year later than this?

26 MR. ROLLING: Yes.

27 MR. SEDGWICK: This figure would be 28 a little over 17 billion.

29 MR. ROLLING: That is correct. That 30 would be for 1962. Your increase would be reflected in

1 two ways -- one, your increases in prices of commodities
2 as well as the (rest of sentence garbled).

3 Some other pertinent points that you
4 may find of value. There are slightly over 60,000
5 retail outlets in the Province of Ontario. These, of 6 course would have to be broken down into service 7 types of independent operators as against the type 8 who would be handling actual products for resale.
9 Actually across Canada there are approximately 10 180,000 retail outlets of which 9,000 some-odd, 11 practically 10,000 would be composed of department
12 stores of four or more (). These figures too, 13 on a breakdown, are available here if they would be 14 of assistance to the Committee.

15 THE CHAIRMAN: Yes. If you would 16 supply the Secretary with copies that would be useful.

17 MR. ROLLING: The delegation that we 18 have present today represents a cross-section of the 19 independent retail trade and we are prepared to the 20 best of our ability to answer any questions that the 21 Committee may want to ask.

22 THE CHAIRMAN: Would you care to 23 introduce the other members of your delegation?

24 MR. ROLLING: Yes. We have Mr.
25 Walter Boys of Woodstock, Ontario who owns two 26 independent appliance stores. Our President, Mr. More 27 on my right is in the appliance business in Stayner, 28 Ontario. Mr. Allen B. Collis is in the car business 29 in Peterborough, Ontario.

30 MR. MACDONALD: What business?

1 MR. ROLLING: The car business. Two 2 of my delegation is missing, one man from Kitchener 3 in the camera and supply business and one in the 4 men's wear field from Toronto. Perhaps they will 5 come later.

6 THE CHAIRMAN: If they do come later
7 we would appreciate you introducing them.

8 We will proceed then with any questions
9 the Committee might have, starting with Mr. Sedgwick.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: Well, Mr. Rolling, you
11 don't have any written brief?

12 MR. ROLLING: I beg your pardon?

13 MR. SEDGWICK: You don't propose to 14 present a written brief?

15 MR. ROLLING: No, Mr. Sedgwick, we 16 have already endorsed the brief given by the Retail 17 Council, in conjunction with our organization.

18 MR. SEDGWICK: I was just going to 19 ask you that. You then of course know that the 20 Committee is concerned with consumer credit, not really 21 with retail sales, except to the extent that retail 22 sales involve consumer credit. Firstly, about how 23 many members are in your organization?

24 MR. ROLLING: This was stated in the 25 brief, in the beginning of the brief the other day, Mr.
26 Sedgwick, on the first page.

27 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, I see, in the 28 Retail Council's brief.

29 MR. ROLLING: It would represent 30 approximately an active membership of slightly over

1 4,000 in the Province of Ontario.

2 MR. SEDGWICK: And to what extent
3 do your members extend credit to consumers?

4 MR. ROLLING: This would be difficult
5 to answer as an absolute figure, Mr. Sedgwick, but 6 we would perhaps be safe to estimate that generally 7 across our membership I think I would be close by 8 stating that perhaps 30 to 40% of the business they 9 do may be some form of consumer credit.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: And as they are small 11 and independent merchants how do they do their 12 financing? By that I mean do they carry the debt 13 themselves or do they refinance with finance companies 14 or do they go to a bank -- how do they do that 15 financing. Let me give you a concrete example.
16 Suppose I go into the gentleman who sells cameras
17 and bought a hundred dollar camera and gave him
18 twenty dollars down. How would the camera man 19 finance the remaining $80.00?

20 MR. ROLLING: I think, Mr. Sedgwick, 21 to give you an answer to that, many independent 22 retailers would carry some portion of their credit 23 themselves. And some portion of the credit may be 24 carried by outside finance companies whom they may 25 use.

26 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes. That is, they 27 would assign the debt.

28 MR. ROLLING: They may.

29 MR. SEDGWICK: In those cases they 30 would assign the debt and the obligation to pay would

1 be an obligation on the customer to pay the finance 2 company and the finance company would look after it,
3 is that right?

4 MR. ROLLING: This is right.

5 MR. SEDGWICK: Then I suppose if the 6 customer defaulted the finance company turns the 7 statement back to the dealer and the business of 8 collection becomes his. Is that right?

9 MR. ROLLING: This would vary, Mr.
10 Sedgwick. Some finance companies may handle the 11 paper with no recourse and other may handle it with 12 recourse. In other words the sale in that particular 13 case repossession may take place, as you mentioned, 14 on the part of the finance company on default. On 15 the other hand it may be given back to the retailer.

16 MR. SEDGWICK: We were furnished
17 yesterday with samples by Simpson-Sears and Eaton's 18 and Freeman's and Morgan's, and in each case they 19 showed their finance charges expressed either in 20 absolutes or expressed, in the case of Morgan's and 21 Freeman's, as a percentage of the balance of the 22 previous month. Do your members, or do any of them, 23 have similar charts as to their finance charges?

24 MR. ROLLING: I think generally I 25 would have to answer that by saying no, unless they 26 were handling it through a finance company; then the 27 chart would, of course, be --

28 MR. SEDGWICK: Then, of course, they 29 would adopt the chart of the finance company, would 30 they not?

1 MR. ROLLING: In that particular
2 case, yes.

3 MR. SEDGWICK: Well, coming back to 4 my $100.00 camera and the $80.00 balance which the 5 camera merchant held the debt himself. What would I 6 pay as a service charge for, say, six month's credit.
7 Is there any fixed fee, or does he make his own mind 8 up?

9 MR. ROLLING: Well, this would vary
10 particularly if the man was going to carry it himself.
11 I think this perhaps could be answered for you if 12 we apply this to the appliance business instead of 13 the camera. I would call on Mr. Boys of Woodstock 14 and perhaps he could furnish an answer for you on 15 that.

16 MR. SEDGWICK: Well I think it would 17 be helpful because it is only in that aspect of retailing
18 that this Committee is concerned. It isn't concerned 19 with the point of sale except to the extent that the 20 point of sale involves an extension of credit. By 21 that I mean, if the grocer sells groceries and is paid
22 cash, that isn't really the concern of this Committee 23 because there is no element of consumer credit involved.
24 I don't think this Committee is much concerned if the 25 grocer sells on a Monday and is paid on Saturday because 26 really that's a very ephemeral consumer credit and 27 involves, as I understand it, really no cost to the 28 consumer. Whatever the customer gives may be on 29 Monday, he pays that amount on Saturday. This Committee 30

1 is concerned with those cases where a charge is 2 collected for credit. And if Mr. -- what was his 3 name?

4 MR. ROLLING: Mr. W. W. Boys of 5 Woodstock, Ontario.

6 MR. SEDGWICK: I'm sure the Committee
7 would like to know what his practice is, how he 8 finances that extended credit which involves finance 9 charges.

10 MR. BOYS: Mr. Sedgwick, I can only 11 speak from my own experience of 19 years in this 12 business. At the start, as many others, I started 13 on a shoestring so my credit extensions have been 14 entirely through finance companies.

15 MR. SEDGWICK: By that, you would 16 have available, just as an automobile dealer does, 17 the finance company's form, is that correct?

18 MR. BOYS: That's true.

19 MR. SEDGWICK: And then when -- let us
20 move into the refrigerator, this is along your line -- 21 then if I bought a refrigerator and paid so much cash, 22 you would complete the finance company form, have me 23 sign it and then discount the figure with the finance 24 company, is that correct?

25 MR. BOYS: That's true, and we would 26 invite the customer to make the payments in our store.
27 We keep you coming in to see us and we keep in touch
28 with you and make sure that you are satisfied. If you 29 make payments yourself to the finance company, the 30 finance company will advance me the total unpaid balance

1 of the contract.

2 MR. SEDGWICK: Then as you made
3 selections -- I suppose on a monthly basis -- you 4 would prepare a form showing the collections paid, 5 the money would be sent to the finance company and 6 ultimately, if all went well, each particular note 7 would be liquidated in that way, is that right?

8 MR. BOYS: That's true.

9 MR. SEDGWICK: Well then, you said
10 that was what you did when you were not able to finance 11 it yourself. Do you now, to some extent at least, 12 do your own financing?

13 MR. BOYS: About two-thirds.

14 MR. SEDGWICK: About two-thirds. And 15 do you have any -- do you take a note, for instance, 16 do you take some security or collateral itself?

17 MR. BOYS: We take the -- in many 18 cases of customers of long standing with number one 19 records we perhaps just have them sign the invoice.

20 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes. And then, let 21 us suppose the refrigerator is $500.00 and $50.00
22 is paid down and the balance is to be paid in nine 23 equal payments of $50.00. That would be a not unusual 24 transaction, is that right?

25 MR. BOYS: Well, usually there will 26 be a finance charge.

27 MR. SEDGWICK: Well, that's what I
28 was coming to. What finance charge would be added?

29 MR. BOYS: It is based on 9% per 30 annum.

1 MR. SEDGWICK: Nine percent per 2 annum. You say it is based on that. How is it 3 expressed to the buyer, to the customer?

4 MR. BOYS: In dollars and cents only.

5 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes, in absolute figures.
6 Does the customer know at the time of purchase that 7 if credit is extended how much additional he will 8 pay monthly in order to cover the service charge?

9 MR. BOYS: Oh, definitely.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: And he knows, you say,
11 in dollars and cents. I'm looking at the Simpson-Sears 12 and if the amount outstanding were $500.00 the 13 monthly service charge would be $6.00, as shown on 14 their statement. Would you express it the same way 15 to your customer?

16 MR. BOYS: If the balance was $500.00
17 and they wanted twelve equal monthly payments, the 18 9% on the unpaid balance, which would be $450.00, --

19 MR. SEDGWICK: Let's take 500, it is 20 easier to do our calculating.

21 MR. BOYS: $45.00 would be added on 22 the unpaid balance and then the nearest dollar will be 23 added at so much a month starting on such and such a 24 date.

25 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes. Well then, let 26 us suppose it is 12 months and $45.00 is added, the 27 service charge would be roughly $4.00 a month, isn't 28 that right? A little less, of course?

29 MR. BOYS: Yes.

30 MR. SEDGWICK: So your deal with your

1 customer would be that he paid you the monthly payment, 2 that is the $450 divided by 12, roughly $40.00, 3 plus $4.00 a month service charge, is that right?

4 MR. BOYS: That's true.

5 MR. SEDGWICK: Now, would the $4.00
6 a month be constant throughout the 12 months or 7 would it be recomputed monthly on the declining 8 balance?

9 MR. BOYS: It would be constant.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: It would be constant.
11 So that of course you will appreciate that you are 12 really charging much more than 9% because as your 13 balance declines you do not have as much money at 14 risk -- you understand that, of course? I mean the 15 9% is just a figure of convenience which you use to 16 compute the service charge, is that right?

17 MR. BOYS: Yes. They are invited, 18 of course, if there is any opposition whatsoever to 19 our finance charge, and it is below the usual acceptance
20 corporation charge, then I invite them very strongly 21 to borrow the money from the bank or wherever they 22 wish to borrow it, because I would rather have the 23 cash than the finance charges.

24 MR. SEDGWICK: Did you listen to Mr.
25 Weir yesterday afternoon and the day before? Were 26 you here then?

27 MR. BOYS: I was here Monday, sir.

28 MR. SEDGWICK: I see, well then I
29 take it you take the same position that he took, namely 30 that your merchants are not finance companies and the

1 less financing you have to do the better pleased you
2 are. Is that correct?

3 MR. BOYS: Yes, sir.

4 MR. SEDGWICK: So again, coming back
5 to my $500.00 refrigerator, if after the first month
6 the purchaser decides to pay it off, the only finance 7 charges he would pay would be the $4.00 for one month, 8 is that correct?

9 MR. BOYS: That's true, yes.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: There is no penalty 11 at all?

12 MR. BOYS: None whatsoever.

13 MR. SEDGWICK: It's a flat figure
14 throughout the term of your contract and he can pay 15 it up when he likes. Suppose he accelerates his 16 payments in cost? By that I mean, if his obligation 17 is to pay $40.00 a month, one month because he has 18 worked overtime, as Mr. White says, he pays $80.00.
19 Do you reduce the service charge for the succeeding 20 months?

21 MR. BOYS: (Inaudible)

22 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, I see. So if at 23 the end of the time the account is paid sooner, then 24 he would have a reduction in service charge. Is that 25 correct.

26 MR. BOYS: Yes. We charge $4.00 a
27 month for 12 months, for instance, and they pay it 28 off in eleven, they get $4.00 off. If they pay it 29 off in 10 months they get $8.00 off.

30 MR. SEDGWICK: I see.

1 MR. BOYS: That isn't very clear
2 to them I know perhaps because they haven't borrowed 3 a large amount, as you say, at the beginning of the 4 contract. We feel to get them back into the market
5 to buy a stereo set, let's say, I would like to see 6 them pay that account out or add to it, and that's 7 why we give a large rebate.

8 MR. SEDGWICK: I was going to come
9 to the add-ons. If having purchased a refrigerator
10 and made the payments for two months or four months 11 and having discharged or nearly discharged that debt, 12 they decide to buy a TV set, that would be just added 13 to the same account, is that correct?

14 MR. BOYS: That's true.

15 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes. And then the 16 service charge would be recomputed on the new figure, 17 is that right?

18 MR. BOYS: That's true. A rebate
19 would be given as soon as the first account is 20 paid up.

21 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes, and then you start
22 with the new figure -- shall we say 600 -- you recompute 23 your service charge and you will recompute your 24 monthly payments. Is that right?

25 MR. BOYS: Yes.

26 MR. SEDGWICK: For how long periods
27 do you extend credit?

28 MR. BOYS: For 24 months.

29 MR. SEDGWICK: I see. That's your 30 maximum, is it?

1 MR. BOYS: And a minimum payment
2 of $10.00.

3 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes. I suppose you
4 sell hard goods, do you?

5 MR. BOYS: Hard goods and services.

6 MR. SEDGWICK: Hard goods and services.
7 Do you have any average? By that I mean do some 8 people want six months, some a year, some eight months, 9 some 24?

10 MR. BOYS: They can have anything
11 up to 24 months, and the kind of payments you feel you 12 can make per month. It's a convenience.

13 MR. SEDGWICK: Do you make any attempt 14 to separate the operation of your credit department
15 from the operation of your shop? What I am thinking 16 of, sir, is the question of profitability. Do you
17 find that you make money on the extension of credit 18 or lose money. And when I say make money I'm not 19 considering the fact that you keep people coming into 20 your shop, because that's a facet of merchandising, 21 but isolated from your ordinary business does the 22 credit part of your business pay its way or lose or 23 make money?

24 MR. BOYS: I don't know what to say
25 to this. I hope it does pay its way and it pays a 26 little more than it should because it is a certain 27 service to the customer that the cash customer does 28 not receive and therefore it should pay its way and 29 perhaps a little more because of our risk involved 30 and our extra work. We have credit transactions of 1 34,000 possibly on our own books and it certainly 2 takes up a lot of my time and --

3 MR. SEDGWICK: Yes, of course. How 4 big a staff do you have all told?

5 MR. BOYS: Seven.

6 MR. SEDGWICK: So that I take it you
7 don't try to allocate the wages of those seven people 8 as between selling and servicing and credit, is that 9 right?

10 MR. BOYS: Not a breakdown, no.

11 MR. SEDGWICK: No. So you wouldn't 12 have any accurate figures as to whether your credit 13 department wins, loses or draws, is that right?

14 MR. BOYS: You are quite right.
15 Our monthly statement has nothing to do with the 16 credit part.

17 MR. SEDGWICK: No. You lump everything
18 together and profitability is measured by overall 19 profit, is that right?

20 MR. BOYS: Yes.

21 MR. SEDGWICK: How many outstanding
22 credit accounts do you say you have at this time?

23 MR. BOYS: About 34,000.

24 MR. SEDGWICK: That would be 34,000
25 different customers or --

26 MR. BOYS: No, $34,000.00. It could 27 be perhaps 175 different customers.

28 MR. SEDGWICK: And I suppose it is 29 to some extent cyclical. That is it will mount up 30 just before Christmas?

1 MR. BOYS: That's true.

2 MR. SEDGWICK: About what would be 3 the maximum amount of money that you would have to 4 risk in that way at your peak time of year?

5 MR. BOYS: Well, this is best we 6 have done -- 34,000.

7 MR. SEDGWICK: 34,000, I see.

8 MR. BOYS: As the business financially
9 is able to carry more of our own accounts I find it 10 is very,very beneficial to carry our own accounts 11 because of the flexibility between ourselves and 12 the customer. It's a personal obligation and it 13 certainly saves them some interest, especially those 14 that prepay, the prepayment is so much better --

15 MR.SEDGWICK: If you handle it 16 yourself.

17 MR. BOYS: Yes.

18 MR. SEDGWICK: I think you said, and 19 I may be wrong, that about two-thirds of your credit 20 business is now carried by yourself, is that right?

21 MR. BOYS: That's right.

22 MR. SEDGWICK: So if you are carrying 23 about 34,000 there will be something like another 24 16,000 or 17,000 which you are still financing with 25 finance companies, is that correct?

26 MR. BOYS: Yes.

27 MR. SEDGWICK: Would that be on larger 28 items mostly?

29 MR. BOYS: No. That would be perhaps 30 clients we haven't been able to afford to carry.

1 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, yes, I see. When 2 you don't consider yourself liquid enough to carry 3 any more you send them over to the finance company, 4 is that it? You wouldn't have to make any selection 5 by size or good or bad accounts or anything of that 6 kind?

7 MR. BOYS: No, but we certainly don't 8 lose a sale by not financing it ourselves. It has 9 become very prevalent that we find that we must to 10 fill our sales and keep our present sales to finance 11 our own people.

12 MR. SEDGWICK: Thank you very much,
13 sir. I think those are all the questions I have.

14 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Irwin, do you
15 have any questions?

16 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, I have one other 17 question. I addressed my question to you, sir, because 18 you are here, but do you think that your own experience 19 would be reasonably typical of the group that you 20 are presenting here this morning?

21 MR. BOYS: I wouldn't like to say
22 that, sir. I don't just get in touch with enough 23 appliance stores to know their business.

24 MR. SEDGWICK: Thank you.

25 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Irwin?

26 MR. IRWIN: Yes, Mr. Chairman, and 27 I'll try not to cover the ground Mr. Sedgwick has 28 covered. I would like to ask Mr. Rolling some general 29 questions. In the extension of credit by these 30 independent retail stores would any particular store or

1 an average pattern of all stores indicate that 2 credit was extended in different forms, like there 3 would be a conditional sales contract, there would 4 by the cycle credit such as we heard about yesterday, 5 a budget account and a straight open 30 day charge
6 account. Generally speaking do the independent 7 retailers use any one of these forms in particular 8 or by preference. For instance would you find an open 9 charge account in a retail operation?

10 MR. ROLLING: To answer that as a 11 general question I would say perhaps the forms that 12 we heard about over the last two days are not in 13 general use necessarily by retailers. This is, of 14 course, governed by the size of their operation and 15 to attempt to qualify that a little further, as a 16 general rule the type of financing that you heard
17 talked of by Mr. Boys would be more generally, I 18 believe, in use by the retailers.

19 MR. IRWIN: In other words, generally
20 speaking a person buying an article would either pay 21 for it entirely at the time or he would, if there 22 was a balance unpaid, he would enter into a conditional 23 sales contract with the vendor.

24 MR. ROLLING: This would be --

25 MR. IRWIN: This would be the general 26 case. In other words, we are not likely to run into the 27 cycle accounts or budget accounts such as is used by 28 the department stores?

29 MR. ROLLING: Not as a general rule.

30 MR. IRWIN: The Second question I think

1 has been answered in response to Mr. Sedgwick, but 2 the conditional sales contract which is entered into 3 might be retained by the vendor or it might be sold 4 to a third party finance company and in that case of 5 being sold to that house, generally speaking would 6 such paper be sold without recourse to the merchant?

7 MR. ROLLING: I couldn't answer
8 that, Mr. Irwin, as a general rule. The fact is 9 some finance companies do have no recourse and others
10 do not. But it has been a practice over many years
11 and I speak now as though I am reasonably familiar 12 with it as I've been in the finance business, that 13 as a general statement the dealer is responsible 14 for a repossession that is made. It could be returned 15 to him in good or bad condition and he must be 16 covered, if possible, if this event does take place.

17 MR. IRWIN: Maybe, I wonder if we 18 could get the terms here. If the paper is sold to 19 that company without recourse to the dealer that would 20 mean that the dealer gets his money and that's the 21 end of it. He has no further liability or any other 22 action that he has to take in regard to his customer, 23 is that right?

24 MR. ROLLING: Not as far as I know.

25 MR. IRWIN: But if there is recourse 26 then the paper is turned back to the dealer and the 27 dealer has to pay back the finance company and then 28 take such action against the customer as he can by 29 repossession or otherwise to cover the debt.

30 MR. ROLLING: Except to repossess there

1 is not too much action he can take against the 2 customer. His problem is to try to recover what he can 3 on the repossessed merchandise.

4 MR. IRWIN: In other words, the 5 repossession might have been taken, or the action to 6 repossess might have been taken by the finance company 7 and then the article in question would be returned 8 to the dealer to resell or somehow recover on it and 9 in addition the finance company would be paid out by 10 the merchant and then the merchant would try to recover 11 the balance of the debt.

12 MR. ROLLING: This is right.

13 MR. IRWIN: Thank you. Then, would 14 there be any basic or determinable difference in 15 the amount of total finance charges charged to the 16 customer on the conditional sales contract in the 17 case of recourse paper or non-recourse paper?

18 MR. ROLLING: I would like to have 19 our President, Mr. More, answer that. He is in the 20 appliance business in Stayner, Ontario and perhaps 21 has had such an occasion.

22 MR. MORE: Mr. Irwin, there definitely
23 is a difference between non-recourse paper and recourse
24 paper. But appliance people, my line of business 25 particularly, don't use the non-recourse companies. We 26 are trying to be competitive in the financing field.
27 The use of recourse paper makes the rate pretty steep.

28 MR. IRWIN: In other words, if the 29 arrangement between the merchant and the finance 30 company is non-recourse, the customer is likely to be

1 paying more in finance charges for the same initial 2 advance than if it was recourse paper.

3 MR. MORE: Definitely.

4 MR. IRWIN: Could you give any idea 5 what the spread might be?

6 MR. MORE: I couldn't give it to 7 you in figures, sir.

8 MR. IRWIN: Well to take Mr. Boys'
9 add-on of 9%, supposing -- I don't know if it's true 10 or not -- supposing this was non-recourse paper, an 11 add-on of 9%, a recourse paper would result in an 12 add-on of 10% . Would it be that much?

13 MR. BOYS: Oh, there would be that 14 much difference.

15 MR. IRWIN: That much. Would it be 16 11%?

17 MR. BOYS: I think so, sir.

18 MR. IRWIN: Would it be 12%?

19 MR. BOYS: Well, like Mr. More, I 20 never use the non-recourse stuff. (Next sentence 21 inaudible)

22 MR. MORE: I would say, Mr. Irwin
23 when you get a non-recourse paper you are getting 24 close to the loan company figures.

25 MR. IRWIN: Well perhaps it isn't 26 important to tie it down, but there is a differential 27 as far as the buyer of merchandise is concerned. He's 28 likely to pay more in finance charges for the initial 29 advance if the paper is non-recourse than if it is 30 recourse.

1 Is it -- I was going to use your 2 contracts, but it would be too general -- is it a 3 practice among the small independent retailers to 4 set up a separate company for the purpose of carrying 5 out the finance arrangements in regard to the 6 conditional sales paper?

7 MR. MORE: It's not generally done
8 in the small, independent retailers. It could be 9 done in the larger operations, but not generally.
10 I'm speaking of appliances.

11 MR. IRWIN: The ordinary practice
12 would be either that the retailer carried his own 13 contract or he discounted them with a finance company.

14 MR. MORE: That's right. You are 15 speaking about sales, Mr. Irwin. Of course there 16 are many things to be considered other than sales.
17 We have a lot of service accounts -- going back to 18 the question Mr. Sedgwick posed -- about how long, what 19 interest charges would be applied to book accounts.
20 There are many book accounts which develop through 21 default, not by choice of the dealer and not by 22 arrangement, but by default.

23 MR. BOYS: This could vary, Mr. Irwin, 24 too with the size of the operation. There are quite 25 substantial service accounts and these may take 26 from 30 or 90 or 120 or longer periods of time through 27 default of the consumer not paying, no arrangements 28 being made.

29 MR. IRWIN: At the beginning -- it's 30 an open account, yes. Well, this isn't a question, it's

1 a comment which might be of some interest to the line
2 of questioning that has developed. I make this 3 observation as an accountant that where it does 4 exist a separate company, the shares of which are 5 owned by the merchant and the purpose of that company
6 is to, in effect, finance the paper of the retail 7 store, that my observation is that it is possible
8 because of that type of separation to determine 9 how profitable the finance operation is as distinct 10 from the store operation. Would you agree with that?

11 MR. MORE: Absolutely.

12 MR. IRWIN: But where the merchant 13 does not have a separate vehicle that operates his 14 credit arrangements in regard to customers, some 15 of whom may elect the open account, some of them 16 may take the conditional sales contract and so on.
17 It is very difficult to assess whether the service 18 charges result in a profit by themselves. It's just 19 an accounting problem, it isn't that the merchant is 20 trying to hide anything. I just want to make this 21 clear from my observation. It's just that it is a 22 difficult processing analysis to be made. But where 23 there is a separate vehicle, a separate company, then 24 it can be made, it's quite possible to relate the 25 income from the finance charges to the cost of the 26 finance operation. So that you are not prepared 27 to answer.

28 The next question: Where there is 29 a separate company in a separate finance operation, 30 is it generally a profitable operation?

1 MR. MORE: I don't think it's 2 possible for us to answer that, sir. I would say,
3 Mr. Irwin, that taking reference to the finance 4 companies there must be some profit in finance
5 companies. (Laughter).

6 MR. IRWIN: In the case of where your 7 merchant is discounting paper with the finance company 8 with or without recourse, is it customary for the 9 finance company to pay the entire sum over to the 10 merchant on the initial advance or is there not a 11 reserve held back by the finance company.

12 MR. MORE: Well, this may be dependent
13 upon the condition of the retailer, I would say, 14 Mr. Irwin; if they feel he is capable of buying 15 back the merchandise they are advancing on, they 16 aren't concerned about the debt --

17 MR. IRWIN: Supposing the merchant's
18 record is a satisfactory one to the finance company, 19 does not the merchant sometimes receive some kind 20 of an income from the finance company as the result 21 of his experience.

22 MR. MORE: Experience rating. Well,
23 there is some experience rating as such, say a 24 small percentage of the charges. Usually in this 25 case there are two rate charges, and again, as I say, 26 being competitive it would have to be absorbed in 27 the retail sale at cost. If you are interested in 28 giving the customer the best possible finance rate 29 you can, so we always give them the cheapest rate 30 charged.

1 MR. IRWIN: Assuming satisfactory
2 experience, the merchant does gain some income from 3 the finance operation where the paper is discounted 4 with the finance company.

5 MR. MORE: Well on paper it might 6 look this way, but it doesn't --

7 MR. IRWIN: Well, I'm not speaking 8 about whether it is profitable to do so, he does get 9 a receipt of some kind from the finance company?

10 MR. MORE: A little bit of rebate
11 set up, yes.

12 MR. IRWIN: Then we touched on 13 another point. Is it likely that customer A who 14 comes in to buy an article, Mr. Sedgwick's refrigerator, 15 and customer A in your books is not a very good risk.
16 Customer B comes in to buy the identical article 17 with the same down payment and in your book he is 18 a very good risk, he's a good customer. Would the 19 merchant charge customer A -- perhaps by prearrangement
20 with the finance company, I don't know -- in other 21 words, are there two schedule of rates? A gets this 22 rate and B gets that rate?

23 MR. MORE: I mentioned there are 24 two sets of rates in some companies, Mr. Irwin. Again 25 I say (rest of sentence inaudible) I would say, your 26 question, you know we don't operate this way. This 27 practice may occur in some businesses but not in mine.

28 MR. IRWIN: These rates when explained
29 to the customer -- I know that they are explained from 30 my observation, the customer gets a statement of the

1 deal; the article costs so much, the down payment
2 is so much and there is a net balance due and then 3 the add-on of the charges and there is a total balance
4 or aggregate balance due. Would it be a common 5 practice to indicate the add-on charges as, say, 9%
6 of the unpaid balance?

7 MR. MORE: As opposed to the dollar
8 figure?

9 MR. IRWIN: Yes.

10 MR. MORE: Well, in addition the 11 dollars and cents would have to be calculated out.

12 MR. IRWIN: I always wonder if 13 somewhere you say we are adding on 9% of $100.00, 14 therefore it is $9.00 and you are going to pay $109.00.

15 MR. MORE: There are two types
16 of customers, I find. There is one customer who 17 is interested in percentage and he's very quick to 18 calculate his own percentage rate. He takes the 19 dollars and cents and applies them to the balance.
20 The other person is not interested in the percentage 21 but the number of dollars. You are dealing with 22 different types of people here.

23 MR. MACDONALD: This is the first 24 person who has admitted there is a customer who 25 is interested in the rate.

26 MR. MORE: Oh there definitely is,
27 Mr. MacDonald.

28 MR. MACDONALD: We have been going 29 for a year and this is the first time it has been 30 admitted. What percentage of your customers would be

1 percentage customer?

2 MR. MORE: Part of it depends on 3 the influence of education.

4 MR. MACDONALD: Well, could you give 5 us some idea of the percentage of customers you would 6 have who were interested in the percentage rate as 7 opposed to dollars?

8 MR. MORE: Very small.

9 MR. MACDONALD: Very small -- 10%?

10 MR. MORE: Yes, possibly.

11 MR. REILLY: Repeat that again for 12 Mr. MacDonald, will you? It is 10% or less that would 13 be interested in making the inquiry.

14 MR. LAWRENCE: Just because you
15 interjected that, the 90% ought to be enlightened 16 also. That's what we are trying to do.

17 MR. REILLY: I just wanted you to 18 know that 10% are interested in the answer.

19 MR. MACDONALD: I appreciate your 20 correcting me because I was engaged in another 21 conversation. (Laughter). I agree with something
22 that Mr. Bukator said, though -- this is the proportion 23 of our task. Because if we can educate the other 90 24 we can free a lot of money that has been wasted in 25 credit today for sales and consumer goods and boost 26 the economy thereby.

27 MR. LAWRENCE: Start 40 years ago.

28 MR. MORE: There are certainly a 29 great number of people who would be interested in the 30 percentages.

1 MR. SEDGWICK: You said some people
2 ask.

3 MR. MORE : That's quite straight-
4 forward, that they do, 30% of the people do ask.

5 MR. IRWIN: Just to call for your 6 opinion on the matter -- supposing the add-on rate
7 is 9% and the dollars are also clearly shown -- I
8 think that is essential -- would there be any objection 9 by anybody, by any customers, to having that there?

10 MR. MORE: Very rarely because, as 11 Mr. Boys pointed out, we give them the option of 12 borrowing this money from any source they desire.
13 If they have to pay extra money because their bank 14 credit is not good, so they pay the extra money 15 willingly.

16 MR. IRWIN: In other words, if the 17 statement of the deal clearly shows the unpaid balance
18 and the total of the dollars of the finance charges 19 and also clearly shows the aggregate of the payments 20 to be made and also the monthly payment that has to 21 be made over the number of months to equal the 22 aggregate, certainly I would think that everybody 23 would want to know that. You would want to know it as 24 the merchant and they would want to know it as the 25 buyer. But if in addition you added a line which said 26 these charges are an add-on of 9% of the unpaid balance, 27 would you have any objection to saying that?

28 MR. MORE: No.

29 MR. IRWIN: Would the customer have 30 any objection?

1 MR. MORE: I think there might be --
2 if we could say it was 9% I don't think anybody 3 would fight about this. The point that I would 4 object to would be calculating this actual amount.

5 MR. IRWIN: You mean working it out
6 to the last decimal place?

7 MR. MORE: Yes.

8 MR. IRWIN: Well that leads to another
9 question. One of the terms of the Committee is that 10 -- I don't want to get into a big argument about 11 this problem, but -- an add-on is roughly actuarially
12 18% per annum. Leave out the word interest, state 13 it as percent per annum on a reducing balance of the 14 unpaid balance. Would you have any objection to 15 adding a further line saying, another two lines, 16 these charges are based on a 9% add-on which represents 17 an 18% per annum on a declining balance. Would you 18 have any objection to that?

19 MR. MORE: Well you are getting 20 into something that is a little deeper than just 21 strictly interest here.

22 MR. IRWIN: I agree. We are leaving
23 interest out of it because it's too complicated a 24 problem. On a straight statement.

25 MR. MORE: It's 18%, as you say, but 26 you are including many services in that.

27 MR. IRWIN: Oh, yes, I recognize 28 that.

29 MR. MORE: I think if you are going
30 to state a figure like that you have to break it down

1 as such.

2 MR. IRWIN: This could become a
3 very involved argument. I would just like to keep it 4 on a simple basis. Supposing actuaries could provide 5 you with accurate tables interpreting what a 9% add-on 6 was in terms of a percent per annum on a declining 7 balance. Supposing they could -- and I think they 8 could -- and so therefore you could add this statement
9 and be certain it was arithmetically accurate. I 10 grant that it includes service charges and adminis-11 tration and all that sort of thing. It is just 12 straight statement. We are -- the charges are 9% 13 add-on which actuarially is 18% per annum on a 14 declining balance. That statement and nothing else.
15 Would the customer object to that?

16 MR. MORE: If it was properly
17 explained to them I don't imagine they would object 18 to it. I wouldn't want to say it was interest.

19 MR. IRWIN: No, no, leave out the 20 word interest, I agree with you, but it's just a 21 straight actuarial calculation interpreting what the 22 9% add-on is, would he object to that?

23 MR. ROLLING: Maybe it would speed
24 up the payments if they knew.

25 MR. MORE: Mr. Irwin I would like to 26 perhaps give you a little picture of that situation 27 of what could or could not occur. If we assume that 28 perhaps our larger mass of buyers are not educated to 29 the actuarial methods of computation, and none of us 30 are, we assume that many of our consumers are not too,

1 we could associate something else on a large purchase 2 of any kind -- a husband and wife situation -- in 3 which the budget of that family would enter into it.
4 If we took a purchase of $140.00 and we said at that 5 particular time to Mr. and Mrs. Jones that we were 6 going to handle the thing in dollars and cents by 7 saying their payments were going to be $20.00 monthly, 8 about $5.00 weekly on a budget. This they can readily 9 see they can handle. But actuarial computation may 10 present the difficulty in which their interpretation
11 of the figure which you gave of 9% add-on and 18% 12 in actuality could present the difficulty in which 13 you bring the wheels of progress to a grinding stop.
14 These people are confused.

15 INAUDIBLE DISCUSSION BETWEEN MANY 16 MEMBERS ALL AT ONCE

17 MR. REILLY: Mr. Chairman, I wonder
18 if Mr. Irwin would like to on this premise then say 19 that if you ask them to add-on 9% here and it 20 represents 18% on the declining balance, whether he 21 would suggest that the banks advertise 6% and it's 22 11.4 on the declining balance. And if we have no 23 control over the banks at 11.4 -- it's a federal 24 matter -- why should we ask them under the circumstances

26 MR. IRWIN : Mr. Chairman and Mr.
27 Reilly, I am not entering into the policy on this, 28 I am simply looking for a reaction to --

29 MR. REILLY: You are a very reactionary 30 person.

1 MR. IRWIN: About what you just said,
2 Mr. Rolling, certainly the husband and wife or the 3 person buying, he wants his statement, the unpaid 4 balance, the dollar amount that the bank charges so 5 that he can put it into his budget, he wants the 6 aggregate to be paid and he wants the monthly charge 7 so he knows that he can carry that amount. What 8 arouses my curiosity is, having that information, 9 which is the information he needs for his budget, 10 why would the addition of these two lines make any 11 difference in his decision, why would he be confused 12 by it? Keep in mind he is not required to make 13 any calculation. It's just that the vendor would make 14 the statement.

15 MR. ROLLING: It would scare the 16 pants off him.

17 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Boys would like 18 to say a word on that.

19 MR. BOYS: If an article sells for 20 $5.00, say, what percentage of this $5.00 item do you
21 use in the packing of that article and the free 22 delivery, we will say 100 miles from the store?

23 MR. BUKATOR: I'd like to ask a 24 question at this point -- how often do you --

25 MR. IRWIN: Well, Mr. Bukator, just 26 let me finish. In other words it isn't that you
27 would find these statements difficult to make, provided 28 you were provided with the necessary information, it 29 is that you do fear an adverse reaction from the 30 customer. Is this not the case? It isn't that it's all

1 that difficult and so on.

2 MR. ROLLING: This is a personal 3 feeling, Mr. Irwin, from my experience. And as to 4 the other two figures, the 9% add-on, Mr. Boys would 5 like to express an opinion on that too.

6 MR. BOYS: Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, 7 our biggest problem in financing accounts is not to 8 get in to having to make two sales at one time and 9 that is where we so very often run into, we put our 10 best efforts forth, our best deal forth, and get 11 an okay from the customer that they will purchase the 12 goods. We are very happy when they say, "I'll give 13 you a cheque for it", or, "I'll pay you in 30 days".
14 There is no interest charged and you go on from that 15 very, very happy. We always have a slight fear 16 arise when they say, "How about payments?" We know 17 if we are not very careful we are into another full 18 scale sale. Now, people tend to ask for them too.
19 What I mean by that, we give them the definite finance
20 figures, the aggregate figures. If they want to know 21 the percentage, and in my case there is one out of 22 20 that asks for percentage, I would tell them. But 23 I know when I tell them it's 9% I have to make another 24 sale because, and I have to be careful I don't lose 25 my purchaser, it's very easily done. Because they 26 have the idea in their minds the banks will loan at 27 6%, and that that's all we pay, and so on. I have 28 to borrow money from the bank at 6%, yes, to carry 29 my accounts. Otherwise I wouldn't if everybody paid 30 cash. As you know today we pay 6% on that total amount

1 borrowed. We may have $5,000.00 borrowed at the 2 bank and pay 6% on it every day, there is no declining 3 balance until we pay the principal off for taxes.
4 We may have $4,000.00 in our current account that we 5 don't get any interest on at all. So that when 6 you have to say to a customer that this is 9%, 7 immediately they feel that you are overcharging, you
8 shouldn't charge more than 6. I have never charged 9 more than 6% on a balance over $200.00 until this year.
10 I have raised it to 9 on the suggestion of my 11 accountants. I was losing money at 6% and I was 12 entitled to more. Still our rate is below finance 13 companies and I am still taking the risk and I am 14 still taking a good percentage of my time looking 15 after these accounts. We don't get 18% because 16 everybody doesn't pay when they should. They 17 call up and say, "I have to pay the doctor this month, 18 can I put it over to next month?" "We will double 19 the payments next month". We say sure, your account 20 is good and we are very happy to oblige. Sometimes 21 we will say, "Forget this month's payment. We will 22 give you an additional month". If we do and they 23 take it, then we charge them the same rate, $20.00 a 24 month or whatever figure you want to use. But I 25 don't think for a minute that the government should 26 put any more restrictions or add any legislation that 27 is going to make it any harder for the retail merchant 28 to carry on his business and make a reasonable profit.
29 When I say a reasonable profit I mean it's a good 30 business today in the retail business if you can make a

1 5% net profit. And that gentleman yesterday who said,
2 "Why don't you give 5% off?" Well, we can't afford 3 it in today's competitive market or we wouldn't make 4 any net profit if we gave 5% for cash. That's the 5 way I feel about it. If we can afford to give 5% off 6 for cash we are charging 5% too much for purchases.
7 And this case was brought up Monday and I read about 8 it in the paper, about someone charging $87\frac{1}{2}\%$ interest
9 on money loaned -- I certainly don't go along with it 10 and no one else does, other than the man who did it.
11 But I think in any case like that there are extenuating 12 circumstances. I think that the borrower should 13 know that. I think the fault lies in the borrower too.
14 And I believe that when we put down the dollars and 15 cents in any finance contract we are doing it the 16 easy, simple way that any purchaser can understand.
17 And I don't see any reason for having to put down 18 percentages for the simple reason that they do not 19 understand it. They think it should be 6%. They 20 don't take into account our troubles in collecting 21 or expenses and so on.

22 MR. IRWIN: Mr. Chairman, I won't 23 belabour this point. I think it has been brought 24 out, what I feel should be brought out, that -- I'll 25 make this statement -- as an accountant, if I were 26 working for you I might very well advise you to raise 27 your add-on from 6% to 9, as sound advice to you. I
28 don't think anybody, certainly not I, would quarrel 29 with your right to evaluate what you think you should 30 get for the service you offer. But I feel that the

1 questions here have brought out that it isn't that 2 it would be all that difficult to do, that the 3 customer wouldn't have a comprehension of what it 4 meant, but that there is a basic and possibly 5 justified fear on the part of the businessman that 6 this would discourage the customer. Would that be 7 a fair statement?

8 MR. BOYS: So far, yes.

9 MR. MORE: Mr. Irwin, if I might 10 interject one little point here. You tell them there 11 is a 3% sales tax in force you spoil a lot of business.
12 That means reselling the customer all over again
13 because of that 3%. A lot of people think it's $30.00 14 on $100.00, you know -- that's how people calculate 15 interest.

16 MR. KERR: Is it not the merchants
17 who have brought some of this grief on themselves?
18 You know, these great ads in the papers about beat 19 the taxes and do these many things. I think they 20 advertise this themselves.

21 MR. ROLLING: There would be an 22 unscrupulous element that might try to capitalize 23 on this, a very small minority.

24 MR. KERR: But they do it.

25 MR. MACDONALD: Mr. Chairman, may I
26 interrupt at this point before we lose contact with 27 what Mr. Boys said, because there is a real dilemma 28 here. I sympathize with the reaction of the different 29 men, and Mr. Boys' reaction, but he says the man who 30 is charging 87%, there is something wrong with him. Now

1 I am convinced that the man who is charging in excess 2 -- the 87% or even 50% or 35%, or something like this 3 -- does it precisely because it is given to him in 4 figures and not percentages. When he went to borrow 5 that money he was told that he was borrowing money 6 at 7% or 10% -- I have forgotten what it was -- 7 but there are a whole lot of other charges, including 8 a bonus thrown in and he hadn't a clue that this added 9 up to 87%. If he had he would never have walked into 10 it.

11 MR. BOYS: Were not these charges
12 put in the contract before he signed?

13 MR. MACDONALD: Well in some instances 14 they were not. But even if they were put on the 15 contract, precisely because the average person is not 16 capable of doing calculating, if you put down and 17 told him the annual interest rate is 7% and the 18 appraisal was such and something else was such and 19 the bonus is so much, he doesn't realize that he is 20 paying 87%. This is our problem as a Committee. If 21 you don't put it down as a percentage, he doesn't 22 realize that all those extra costs add up to an 23 effective annual outlay -- let's get away from interest 24 -- an effective annual outlay of 87% or 18% in the 25 instance of a 9% add-on.

26 MR. BOYS: Is there not a law in this 27 country that the contract cannot be added to or changed
28 in any way after it is signed? And there is also a law 29 that the customer must have a copy of that contract 30 when he signs it, so that is just a straight case of 1 fraud.

2 MR. MACDONALD: The lawyer on my 3 left here says no.

4 MR. BOYS: There is no law that the 5 customer has to get a copy of the contract when he 6 signs it?

7 MR. MACDONALD: I know one of the 8 people who have done it --

9 MR. BOYS: Well, I understand that 10 there is. I don't like to go contrary to the lawyer.
11 But I certainly give it to them. I wouldn't have 12 any reason not to.

13 MR. MACDONALD: I wasn't suggesting 14 that they were added afterwards, I was just suggesting 15 that if the contract doesn't spell out what the total 16 cost to the consumer is in an annual percentage, then 17 he has no idea what he is paying and he can be seriously
18 misled by saying that the interest rate is 6% or 9% 19 if there are a lot of other charges he has to pay.
20 As far as he is concerned this is interest, this is 21 an annual outlay, the accruing of interest.

22 MR. BOYS: This is quite true, but 23 if the interest is computed as dollars and cents in 24 the contract, he would be far more conscious than he 25 would if it was on a percentage basis on the contract.

26 MR. MACDONALD: Why not both? What 27 difference does it make as far as you people are 28 concerned?

29 MR. BOYS: Well if he can't add one
30 and two, then he can't add interest. That's what I'm

1 He can't calculate interest if he can't add one and 2 two, the figures, the final figures, the aggregate 3 figures.

4 MR. LAWRENCE: But he can use them
5 for comparison, though, with finance company charges.

6 MR. BOYS: I would agree with you
7 gentlemen, because we are not the guys you are after, 8 it's these 87½% guys.

9 MR. LAWRENCE: That's right, this 10 would be to your benefit. I can't understand why 11 you take that position, why the opposition? Because 12 the birds we are after and the birds that it should 13 be in your interest that we should be after as well 14 are the bottom 10% of the industry and this would 15 go a great way, I think, to wipe them out. It would 16 seem to your benefit, so I can't understand the 17 opposition.

18 MR. BOYS: Are we dealing with the 19 mortgage or the retail business?

20 MR. LAWRENCE: Well, we're dealing 21 with the whole works and we've got a picture of the 22 whole field.

23 MR. MACDONALD: You say you are not 24 interested in this business really, it's just to get 25 the business, the original business. You are in this 26 as a service and it's really a nuisance. And from 27 the viewpoint of the small retailer I can see where it 28 would be an incredible nuisance because he hasn't got 29 the means for building, in effect, a separate organi-30 zation, whether it is legally a separate entity or not.

1 But if you were really charging 18% and they really 2 can get it from the bank for 11, wouldn't it be 3 good sense -- because everybody knows you can get it 4 from the bank for 11 -- (rest of statement lost in 5 change of tapes)

6 MR. BOYS: We invite them to go and 7 get it someplace else if they can get it cheaper 8 because we would rather have the bird in the hand.

9 MR. REILLY: Everybody can't get 10 money from a bank, Mr. MacDonald.

11 MR. BOYS: It has to be more than 12 6%, but it's in everybody's mind that the bank only 13 charges 6%, which is not true, but it's in their minds.

14 MR. REILLY: This is true. The point 15 for years and years and years has been that bank 16 interest is 6%.

17 MR. BUKATOR: Well it is. I get money
18 at the bank for 6%. I get my $1,000.00 and if a 19 month's time I pay it back I only pay 6% on a demand 20 not. Now what are you talking about?

21 MR. REILLY: No, but not on this --

22 MR. BUKATOR: I'm talking about 23 borrowing money to buy this man's appliance. I can 24 get money at 6% from the bank.

25 MR. MORE: Not everybody can.

26 MR. BUKATOR: Everybody can.

27 MR. MORE: No, very few. A lot of 28 people can't.

29 MR. BUKATOR: Well, I just want to 30 make this one point clear, that money can be borrowed

1 from the bank for 6%.

2 MR. MORE: By you.

3 MR. BUKATOR: By me. I'm not the 4 only one of 20 million that can borrow money
5 from the bank. You borrow it on a demand note, and 6 many of you have done the same thing.

7 MR. MORE: With collateral, with equal
8 collateral.

9 MR. BUKATOR: But that's beside the 10 point.

11 MR. REILLY: It isn't beside the 12 point, it's part of the point.

13 MR. BUKATOR: Mr. Reilly, I think maybe
14 you had better go and figure it out. (Laughter).

15 MR. LAWRENCE: Even the banks have 16 different systems within the same branch if they get 17 a different manager.

18 MR. BUKATOR: Yes, and different
19 clients too.

20 MR. LAWRENCE: In one instance he 21 subtracted the interest and paid me the balance and 22 in the other he added it on and I had that total 23 amount to pay back. So that, sure it makes a difference.
24 And these were different managers in the same bank.

25 MR. MORE: And in our case we get 26 no collateral whatsoever. Money is lent in our 27 business and you get no collateral.

28 MR. BUKATOR: You get a lien on that 29 object, don't you?

30 MR. MORE: Not necessarily, no, not

1 necessarily.

2 MR. LAWRENCE: Don't you get a
3 repossession or a lien --

4 MR. MORE: Not unless it is in the 5 contract.

6 MR. LAWRENCE: What percentage of 7 your business do you do on pure credit, that is no --

8 MR. MORE: Quite a bit.

9 MR. LAWRENCE: Quite a bit -- do
10 you come up with about 40% of your retail business 11 on all sorts of credit? Would you like to estimate 12 how much of that is on pure credit, that is no lien, 13 no nothing. He walks out and you trust him to pay 14 back within 30 days?

15 MR. MORE: 15 to 20% of it.

16 MR. LAWRENCE: 15 or 20% of the 40%?
17 Or 15 to 20% of the total?

18 MR. MORE: Of the total.

19 MR. LAWRENCE: In other words half
20 of your credit business is on pure credit?

21 MR. MORE: No, not half the credit, 22 15% of total volume, total business.

23 MR. LAWRENCE: I see. Then roughly
24 25% is the other. Would this be applicable, do you 25 think, to the major hard goods store operators too 26 who were most reluctant yesterday to give us this?

27 MR. MORE: I don't know how much
28 credit they carry on their own books --

29 MR. LAWRENCE: You wouldn't want 30 to hazard a guess? Because this is a field where

1 government statistics can't help us at all and they 2 wouldn't give it to us. I think this is very material 3 to what our ultimate recommendations are going to 4 be.

5 MR. MORE: To be quite honest, Mr.
6 Lawrence, perhaps they couldn't give it to you. I
7 don't know. We have no way of knowing.

8 MR. LAWRENCE: Oh, I think they could.

9 MR. MORE: Well, it's possible. I
10 don't know.

11 MR. LAWRENCE: I think they could 12 but they didn't want to.

13 MR. ROLLING: I can see really why 14 they wouldn't want to.

15 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Whicher, any 16 questions?

17 MR. WHICHER: We have been talking
18 about the appliance business, what about shoe stores
19 or men's clothing stores, do they do much financing 20 there or is this just straight credit.

21 MR. ROLLING: I think, Mr. Whicher,
22 we can perhaps ask Mr. Allen B. Collis of Peterborough, 23 who is in the apparel business to answer that.

24 MR. COLLIS: Well, if I understand
25 your question, I mean I come from a small town, 26 Peterborough, small retailers, but my experience with 27 clothing stores, I don't think there is any finance 28 charges there at all. I think we give you the credit 29 and there is no cost or else you don't get it.

30 Merchants are not magicians and if you are not paying

1 any service charge you are paying it in the retail
2 prices. Not that's just the position of the merchant 3 in a small town.

4 MR. WHICHER: Well, if I went in 5 an bought a suit, say a $90.00 suit -- and paid $25.00
6 down, don't you charge finance charges on the balance?

7 MR. COLLIS: Yes. We have a charge
8 of 1% on the remaining balance. This is after 30 9 days, 1% on the remaining balance every month.
10 We don't add-on to begin with, we add-on 1% -- on a 11 $100.00 item with $10.00 down, we add-on 1% of the 12 remaining balance of $90.00. If he pays another $10.00
13 another month and we add-on 1% to the $80.00.

14 MR. WHICHER: Would you say that 15 there are fewer small retail merchants now than there 16 were ten years ago?

17 MR. ROLLING: On the contrary, Mr.
18 Whicher, I've got to take these figures from the top
19 of my head, but I would say that the 1951 census 20 showed about 123,000 retail outlets and a proportionate 21 number of chains in Canada, and this figures has now 22 changed to probably 180,000 retail outlets. Some of 23 this can be attributed to increased population.
24 Although there has been, I think, an extraordinary 25 ratio of failures, still they have increased. I think 26 as the population of the country increases, which is 27 quite rapid today, that your retailers increase 28 proportionately.

29 MR. WHICHER: Would you say now
30 that most of the small retailers -- when I say small

1 I mean down maybe to three or four employees, do 2 most of them charge finance charges for their various 3 items. (Rest of question inaudible)

4 MR. ROLLING: It would be a
5 difficult question to answer, Mr. Whicher, from the 6 standpoint of most of the retailers in Canada. A 7 large percentage of retailers in Canada could be 8 in the grocery business, the food business. Most 9 of the food operations -- and I am only familiar 10 with those in Ontario -- quite a bit of credit is 11 carried on a monthly and six-month basis for families 12 and quite a bit is not charged for in any way. And 13 a large percentage of that sometimes becomes a loss, 14 a complete loss. I will give you an example, recently 15 in the Lakehead, of a medium size grocer there with 16 outstandings of close to $30,000.00. Now this is a 17 constant thing, except the retailer could specify on 18 the monthly statement that overdue accounts would 19 be charged a rate of some kind. But as a general
20 rule, in that particular business there is nothing 21 applied on the monthly statement.

22 MR. MACDONALD: He must charging a
23 cent or so more per article or he couldn't survive.

24 MR. ROLLING: Not necessarily, Mr.
25 MacDonald. He's in competition and he must try to 26 treat his customer to retain his customer. With your 27 larger chain stores, your food operation, for example, 28 credit isn't possible at all, it isn't possible to get 29 it. But your independent retailer is able to extend 30 those things and make deliveries, and he's convenient

1 to the neighbourhood and perhaps over the years has 2 dealt with father and son and brother Bill --

3 MR. MACDONALD: I'm not denying that.
4 All I am saying is it would seem to me from a straight 5 point of economics that if he is surviving he must 6 be charging a cent or so more. I'm not being critical 7 of it.

8 MR. ROLLING: Not necessarily.

9 MR. WHITE: This was Mr. Weir's
10 argument yesterday about this rate structure that 11 never did come out, it would be hidden in the higher 12 price, isn't that right?

13 MR. LAWRENCE: Well in some types
14 of business this may be driven underground. Take 15 the retail pharmacy business for a good example, they 16 do carry credit without any rate at all. He takes 17 his fortune where it may lay.

18 MR. ROLLING: What the rest are 19 doing we can't say.

20 MR. LAWRENCE: This is correct.

21 MR. ROLLING: The small retailer
22 makes a lot of it up by working 12 or 14 hours a 23 day.

24 MR. LAWRENCE: That's right, 12 and 25 14 and 18 hours a day.

26 MR. ROLLING: That's right, like a 27 farmer.

28 MR. WHICHER: Let's not compare the 29 two. (Laughter)

30 MR. ROLLING: Why not, they both have

1 to eat. (Laughter)

2 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Bukator?

3 MR. BUKATOR: Well I can't seem to -- 4 as we go on I continue to get confused. The merchants
5 that were here as represented by Mr. Weir say that 6 they would much rather have their cash. If the 7 customer would come in and lay the money on the 8 barrelhead, he could pick up his crackers and go home.
9 This they would like. This gentleman says that he 10 adds on 9% -- and we are talking about interest rates -- 11 on that account. And it has been revealed to us here 12 this morning that that 9% turns into 18%. Now then 13 if you were to have an actual percentage of 18% on 14 that account, don't you suppose that that individual 15 would go shopping for his money somewhere where he 16 could get it for a lesser amount? So then he could 17 come to you and lay your money on the barrelhead.
18 I think he would be helping you instead of hindering 19 you.

MR. MORE: We would hope he would.

20 MR. BUKATOR: Now then we are all
21 looking in the same direction. You want your money
22 and we are going to get it for you. In the meantime 23 that's exactly what's going on. In the meantime you 24 will find the fellow who has been charging the 24 and 25 the 36 -- we have had them up to 87½% -- stopping 26 that practice because these people are putting them
27 out of business or bringing them down to doing business
28 in an ethical way. Now as I said yesterday when Mr.
29 Weir left, I am still sticking to what I believe was 30 right in the first instance, that if the interest rate

1 was revealed on that account people would get their 2 money and they would pay you cash and you would be 3 happy and the lending institutions that are geared 4 to to bear this added expense of handling the accounts 5 would also be happier because they would be turning 6 that much more over. Now all I have to do is convince 7 Mr. Reilly and we are all set.

8 MR. REILLY: Where are the customers
9 going to get the cash?

10 MR. BUKATOR: Well I think the first
11 thing I would do, would be to take my insurance 12 policy -- and there is nobody that I know that hasn't 13 got some kind of insurance -- and I would deposit 14 that with my banker, such as I have done, and I have 15 never seen those policies for years.

16 MR. REILLY: That's why you get money 17 at 6%. Anybody can do that.

18 MR. BUKATOR: That's right. Now Mr.
19 Reilly and I are on exactly the same argument.
20 Anybody can do that that has insurance. I'll take 21 it a step further, that has insurance, and I don't 22 know anybody that has not got insurance.

23 Gentlemen I've made my point. I
24 know that you can get money at a much lower rate than 25 the 18% which you reveal as 9% on your account. And 26 he will come and pay you cash and you will be much 27 happier because you don't have to work overtime to 28 handle those accounts, but the lending institutions 29 that are geared up to handle them can.

30 MR. BOYS: I will go along with you,

1 sir, if you can guarantee that the customer will go 2 to the bank or someplace and get the money and 3 bring it back to me. I can tell you of one case only 4 where I sent the customer to the banker. He got after 5 me and said, "Why should you carry these accounts?
6 Send them to me". I said, "What's the deal?" He said, 7 "$4.75 flat charge plus 6%". I said, "Well, that 8 sounds pretty good, I'll do that". So the next 9 customer who came in, we talked about interest rates 10 and so on and I advised him to go down to my bank and 11 he could borrow the money there. That was three 12 years ago and I'm still looking for my sale.

13 MR. BUKATOR: Now then, to entice
14 these people to come back --

15 MR. REILLY: And that $4.75 might 16 represent 52%.

17 MR. BUKATOR: You don't calculate
18 too well this morning either. What particular item 19 are we talking about, the $5.00 one or the $500.00 20 one?

21 These gentlemen were at Niagara Falls
22 -- by the way thank you very much for the invitation 23 to that lovely dinner, I enjoyed myself -- and some 24 of your members have belonged to your Association for 25 some 50 years, I believe you have been in operation, 26 and you have members who still belong. I do believe, 27 Mr. Chairman, that we are all heading in the same 28 direction trying to help the people who cannot help
29 themselves and I think by revealing somehow to them 30 what it costs them to get their money, this would assist us all.

MR. SEDGWICK: Mr. Bukator, there is one thing, and I speak from personal experience, there is a strong psychological block about borrowing on insurance. When you tell him he can borrow cheaper by spending your insurance policy, I think he is very prone to say, "I'll do without the refrigerator".

MR. BUKATOR: Like his mortgage on his home.

MR. MORE: When you tell him to go out and borrow the money and bring it back, your sale is gone.

MR. BUKATOR: Where do you think the man you sent down to the bank went?

MR. MORE: I don't know, he may have gone about it (rest of sentence inaudible)

MR. LAWRENCE: This isn't a credit problem, though, is it? This is a selling problem. That's your worry.

MR. BOYS: I only say when we have to sell credit we have to make two sales, and the moment we know he is not going to pay cash, we know then we haven't made the sale yet. The consumer today is so well protected with the competitive market we are all in, I can't see anything wrong with it, and, as I say, I think we they can add one and one that's all they need to be able to do, when we show them the aggregate figures that they are going to have to pay.

MR. MACDONALD: Well, but, Mr. Boys, I

1 tried to make the point earlier, the consumer is not 2 in a position to appreciate what advantages the 3 competitive market will give him unless it is 4 calculated on a percentage basis, because otherwise 5 you've got a thousand different ways of doing the 6 calculations and he hasn't a clue as to what the 7 percentage is and therefore he looks at it simply, 8 can I pay it? He only thinks, "Can I pay it in my 9 budget". If he can meet it in his budget he goes 10 ahead and pays it not knowing whether the percentage 11 is 15, 18, 30 or 87.

12 MR. REILLY: He's got the best
13 possible standard he could have in the unit of one 14 dollar.

15 MR. BOYS: That's right. If you
16 gentlemen are going to pass legislation where we 17 have to show percentages, if you are I'm not going 18 to show it is 18% or 9, I'm going to show it as 19 3/4 of 1% per month and I'm still under, I believe, 20 most finance companies and most large chain stores,
21 and that's the way I'm going to do it and I won't 22 mind doing it a bit. Nobody is going to look at it 23 though, because they are going to look at the right-
24 hand column, "what am I going to have to pay?"
25 Sometimes I think what about the merchants? Why 26 doesn't the government pass legislation to keep 27 us from getting taken by some consumers?

28 MR. LAWRENCE: Some legislation
29 favours retailers over the years, as far as resale 30 agreements and a few things like that.

1 MR. WHICHER: I wanted to ask Mr.
2 Boys, if you state your credit at $3/4$ of 1% per 3 month. Now supposing Eaton's had credit at 1% per 4 month, that would be quite an advantage. I mean 5 if the fellow is buying a refrigerator, if he can 6 add one and one, would say, "I got a deal from that 7 fellow in Woodstock, he's giving me credit at $3/4$ 8 of 1% per month."

9 MR. BOYS: My only objection to 10 that is that certain (rest of sentence inaudible)

11 MR. ROLLING: To answer something 12 for Mr. MacDonald with regard to percentage -- and 13 this is only an observation, a personal one--quite 14 a few years ago in the appliance business and it 15 remained a mystery for quite some time until it was 16 properly searched out, some major appliances were 17 advertised at 10% down with cost figures. And you 18 would feel that the average person would be able to 19 apply that very quickly if you quoted the price as 20 $327.56. This is not done and it is rarely a 21 practice today in that field because of the lack of 22 response from Mr. and Mrs. Consumer to apply this to 23 that particular item they were interested in. In 24 putting down dollars and cents of the down payment 25 this was very rapidly and easily applied to their 26 household budgets or what their monthly income might 27 be. I say in dollars and cents it is much more easily 28 handled by most people.

29 MR. REILLY: Mr. Rolling, are you 30 telling us that they weren't able to calculate 10% of 1 the purchase price?

2 MR. ROLLING: As a general rule 3 they weren't getting any response to percentages down, 4 that's right, Mr. Reilly.

5 MR. MACDONALD: Let me put it this 6 way -- tentatively my thinking now is that the 7 educational process can be assisted by putting both 8 down. I grant you that the average person -- this 9 is obvious in view of the testimony we have had -- 10 the average person is not interested in the rate, 11 he is interested in the amount. But over a number 12 of years, if he knew that the effective annual rate
13 was 9 or 18 or 35, I think you would educate him
14 and I agree if we got it into the schools, teaching 15 credit, they would be looking for it and he would be 16 going to the man who was charging $3/4$ of 1% a month
17 even though he is told this is 18, because the man 18 who is charging 1% per month amounts to -- what is it, 19 24?

20 MR. IRWIN:: Three-quarters would 21 be about 9, $3/4$ of 1% would be about 9 actuarially.

22 MR. MACDONALD: But on an unpaid 23 balance, it would be --

24 MR. SEDGWICK: If you add it at 25 the start it would be 15. Mr. Boys adds it at the 26 start.

27 MR. BOYS: Again, sir, if you add
28 it at the end they don't want to pay it, they refuse 29 to pay it. But if I add it first and they pay it 30 sooner they are tickled to death because they are

1 getting a nice good discount.

2 MR. MACDONALD: Mr. Rolling, generally
3 -- our friend from Peterborough indicated that it's 4 1% and apparently this is on the declining balance -- 5 is the general procedure among the smaller retailers
6 who deal in this fashion, that it is on the declining 7 balance or is 1% added on as sort of a calculation
8 of interest and principal over the period?

9 MR. ROLLING: That would be 10 difficult to answer, Mr. MacDonald. It might be 11 principal and interest and benevolence by a 30 day
12 free ride. Mr. Collis pointed out if they are good 13 paying customers and a good risk it is very often 14 forgotten, is that not right?

15 MR. COLLIS: The interest rate is 16 not the important factor, in our business, and I'm 17 sure this happens in many small merchants. You must 18 understand that the cost of operating credit (rest 19 of sentence inaudible)

20 MR. MACDONALD: Well the only point, 21 Mr. Chairman, and we are interested in getting the 22 facts of this statement and come to a conclusion on 23 policy, and I happen to have a very interesting case 24 here of a man who was really sharp. He bought an 25 appliance for $750.00 and he was told that the interest 26 rate was going to be 7% and this would amount to 27 $262.00 over a five year period, $262.70, so the 28 total amount he would have to pay would be $1,012.50.
29 Now the 60th payment was $20.00, but the 59 payments 30 were each $15.92½, which was made up of $12.42½ on

1 the principal and \$4.37 $\frac{1}{2}$ on the interest, but this 2 was not on a declining balance, it was on the 3 overall. So he did a calculation and you will be 4 interested to know that at the beginning of the 5 second year his interest rate was 8.79, at the 6 beginning of the third year his interest rate was 7 11.4, at the beginning of the 3rd year his interest
8 rate was 16.85, at the beginning of the 4th year 9 his interest rate was 32.3 and in the months of 10 the final year, because he was paying on the whole 11 amount and most of it he had already returned, his 12 interest rate escalated in the final 12 months to 13 34 to 48 to 41 to 46 to 52 to 59 to 69 to 83 to 14 103 to 137 to 203, to 391%.

15 MR. WHITE: That doesn't prove a 16 thing, though, that's a blended payment.

17 MR. MACDONALD: Yes, this is blended
18 payment. But what I am saying is -- and I grant 19 you that taking the last year gets you completely 20 out -- but let's go back to the beginning of each 21 year. His interest rate was 7, 8, 11, 16 and 32
22 at the beginning of each year.

23 MR. WHITE: Not really though.

24 MR. MACDONALD: The month at the 25 beginning of each year, on the 13th month, the 25th 26 month, the 37th month and the 49th month.

27 MR. REILLY: What did he do, borrow 28 money from the bank?

29 MR. MACDONALD: Well I'll tell you 30 what this fellow did, he was smart enough to go and

1 borrow the money and get out of the contract.

2 MR. WHITE: That's what he should 3 have done in the first place.

4 MR. MACDONALD: All right, but the 5 point is the average fellow -- this fellow could 6 calculate so he did his calculation. Now the 7 interesting thing is this is Consumers Gas and I 8 checked with the company and this is the way they 9 operate, he conceded, in the accounting department 10 that this is the way they charge.

11 MR. WHITE: This is what it is 12 in every blended payment. You have to determine 13 the effective interest rate over the term.

14 MR. LAWRENCE: What was the average?

15 MR. MACDONALD: I don't know what 16 the average is for the full term. But if the average 17 is 18, all I am saying is that the little fellow 18 comes in and he says, "I am being charged 7%". If 19 he was told that his average interest rate over the 20 whole period was 18, he wouldn't buy.

21 MR. LAWRENCE: He would go and 22 borrow.

23 MR. MACDONALD: This fellow did
24 calculate and therefore did go and borrow and got out
25 of the contract.

26 MR. LAWRENCE: I've got two questions.
27 You probably covered this before I came in and I 28 apologize, but how many of your 4,000 members in 29 Ontario would you estimate use an outside credit 30 group or organization. I mean I have seen in many small

1 store windows "We are members of the IAC" or something 2 like that.

3 MR. MORE: Then you are getting 4 back, sir, to a different classification first of 5 all. There are classifications that wouldn't use 6 outside financing at all.

7 MR. REILLY: There are classifications
8 that what?

9 MR. MORE: That wouldn't use outside
10 financing, small shoe stores and small clothing stores, 11 places of this nature. Appliance stores, for 12 instance, they would all use outside financing, 13 virtually all.

14 MR. LAWRENCE: I see, so it boils
15 down to the type of stores more than anything else.
16 Well you do have department stores, smaller ones, 17 would the majority of those, then, run their own 18 credit organization or would the majority take 19 it outside?

20 MR. MORE: The majority, I would 21 say, do both.

22 MR. LAWRENCE: The majority --

23 MR. MORE: No survey of absolute
24 figures has ever been conducted on this point.

25 MR. LAWRENCE: I guess we will 26 have to ask some of these private operators.

27 MR. MORE: You will have to get out
28 and do a survey from door to door in the retail 29 business.

30 MR. LAWRENCE: How about general

1 stores, do you think the majority of them would use 2 an outside group or not?

3 MR. MORE: On their hard goods.

4 MR. LAWRENCE: On their hard goods.
5 Men's clothing do their own, I assume.

6 MR. MORE: On a small store I would 7 say so, yes.

8 MR. LAWRENCE: And hardware stores
9 would almost exclusively be outside, you think?

10 MR. MORE: On their bigger items.

11 MR. LAWRENCE: And appliances?

12 MR. MORE: Most of them.

13 MR. LAWRENCE: Jewelry stores, what 14 do you think about them?

15 MR. MORE: Outside.

16 MR. LAWRENCE: Outside more than 17 inside?

18 MR. MORE: Well that is the small 19 independent jewelers now.

20 MR. LAWRENCE: Oh, yes.

21 MR. MORE: It would depend a great 22 deal on the amount purchased, Mr. Lawrence.

23 MR. LAWRENCE: Well, the other 24 question I have been trying to ask everybody and have 25 been getting no answers at all. You have been sitting 26 here for three days now and you see what we are after, 27 what we think we're after. Have you any specific 28 suggestions to help us? Or do you even agree that 29 the present situation isn't satisfactory or what?

30 MR. MORE: Well unless you can boost

1 up the banks a little more so the money is a little 2 more freely flowing from the banks you are going to 3 be faced with financing of some sort.

4 MR. LAWRENCE: We are presumably 5 called into session here -- I don't really think 6 the retail store field is one that is bothering the 7 government or the people as much as some other 8 fields, but it is on our agenda and we obviously 9 feel that there is some trouble here or otherwise 10 we wouldn't have asked you to come. Presumably 11 you do too, otherwise you wouldn't have felt it 12 worthwhile to come before us. So there is a problem.
13 The situation at the moment obviously is troubling
14 some people. We are trying to arrive at a standard 15 of comparison so the consumer can compare these 16 different opportunities that are available to him 17 in the credit field. Have you any specific 18 conclusions or suggestions for us as to how we can 19 arrive at an answer?

20 MR. MORE: I think a great deal of 21 that, Mr. Lawrence, was stated in the brief. We 22 are vitally interested in seeing that the consumer 23 be protected from the unscrupulous element that may 24 be present in the retail group. And certainly, from 25 the retailer's viewpoint, that the not unscrupulous 26 retailer be protected from the unscrupulous one too.
27 We are certainly very interested in anything that 28 is going to interfere or slow down the operation of 29 the retailer who may have to get into excessive 30 calculations which would present a major difficulty

1 to a one-man operation as against a one-man and four 2 employees. So this is another reason why we are 3 here to try to lay before you and this Committee
4 as much information of the operation of the contract
5 between a consumer and a retailer. I think further 6 to perhaps assist your observation that a great deal 7 of care needs to be exercise if any of these 8 recommendations are made and if they are to be made 9 that certainly those that are going to be involved in 10 it perhaps may have the opportunity for consultation 11 on such measures. We have something else to that 12 is happening in our society. I truly believe that 13 our average consumer is much more sophisticated than 14 he was, say, eight or ten years ago when perhaps 15 credit wasn't as extensively used as it is today.
16 Mr. MacDonald brought out the point that perhaps it 17 should be dealt with more fully in our schools, 18 particularly our consumer coming up in our high schools.
19 It is being dealt with in the curriculum of education
20 today and I think the consumer is credit wise, more so 21 than ever before. You brought out perhaps an isolated 22 case here and there where the consumers haven't been, 23 but I think as a general rule they are more sophisticated 24 than ever before and getting more so.

25 MR. LAWRENCE: In our search or our 26 groping for a standard of comparison other than the 27 actual money figure, the only other one, I think, that 28 we have been able to hit on so far is a percent; we 29 are not calling it interest, we are calling it just 30 a plain percentage. Have you any alternative to that?

1 MR. ROLLING: Well you would have 2 to break it all down --

3 MR. LAWRENCE: Well, we can't break
4 it down. You people have been foremost in saying 5 that it can't be broken down.

6 MR. BOYS: I fail to see how that 7 would even interest the consumer anyway.

8 MR. ROLLING: The thing is this,
9 as a Retail Merchants Association we are concerned
10 with two or three elements here. The first element 11 is that we are trying not to discourage retailing 12 and certainly not to decrease the amount of retail 13 level. Another thing we are trying to prevent 14 is the complicating of the interest rate, of calculating 15 for the retailer. And of course we are always 16 concerned that the individual consumer is protected.

17 MR. MORE: We have a great danger
18 too, Mr. Lawrence, of trying to regulate the mass of 19 retailers because of a small element of the unscrupulous.

20 MR. LAWRENCE: Laws are always written 21 though for the small element.

22 MR. REILLY: We have laws against 23 murder that deal with only a small percentage of 1%.

24 MR. MORE: Well, you can make this 25 comparison. But we take the unscrupulous who may 26 decide if it was to be used and all the elements that 27 are in it, or carrying charge, as you may want to 28 term it, could vary these things in a variety of ways 29 and we would then have what I would broadly term the 30 battle of interest rates by percentage. To Mr. Irwin

1 the handling of percentage is a toy, but it could 2 also become a toy in the hands of the unscrupulous.

3 MR. REILLY: It's no toy with him,
4 it's an obsession. (Laughter)

5 MR. BOYS: Mr. Chairman, could I ask 6 just one question? To my way of thinking first we 7 sell the goods, then if they want a time-payment plan 8 we sell the time-payment plan, and if it comes that 9 we must show the interest rate on the second sale, 10 why don't we have to show the gross profit rate on 11 the first sale?

12 MR. LAWRENCE: Because we are not 13 so sure that there is profit on it? You are denying 14 there is profit.

15 MR. BOYS: No, no, on the first sale?

16 MR. LAWRENCE: What business is it
17 even of the consumer whether you are getting a 10% 18 markup or a 40% markup. That's your business, not his.

19 MR. BOYS: That's right, now what 20 about the second sale?

21 MR. LAWRENCE: On the second sale
22 as far as a percentage is concerned, it was sold him 23 simply because this furnishes something we have a 24 standard for, or we think it might. Because there 25 are certain bodies in the credit furnishing field 26 that do have to furnish this on a percentage basis.
27 This is where we are presently breaking down, at 28 least we think it's breaking down.

29 MR. BOYS: It's possible, you know,
30 to sell the consumer on a terrific markup too.

1 MR. LAWRENCE: Oh, sure it is.

2 MR. BOYS: So why shouldn't we have 3 to show our gross profit on that first deal, the 4 percentage, if we have to show it on the second?

5 MR. LAWRENCE: Well, as far as 6 consumer credit is concerned, if you think it is and 7 you would like to see some restrictions along this 8 line --

9 MR. SEDGWICK: Don't worry, Mr. Boys, 10 you never will.

11 THE CHAIRMAN: We are involved with 12 dealing with disclosure. How much information we 13 can disclose to the buyer so that he can compare one 14 transaction with one dealer with the same transaction 15 or similar transaction with another dealer. We are 16 interested in your opinion as to how much value it 17 would have to disclose a specific rate and why it 18 might hurt you and so on, that's why we are here, to 19 find these things out.

20 MR. COLLIS: If the federal government 21 charges 10 or 11% federal tax openly rather than 22 hidden, you would have a changed reflection on our 23 customers. If they know how much they are paying -- 24 we had quite a reaction on the 3%, but it's almost 25 forgotten now, but 11%. It would be the same as 26 showing them we are charging -- well, not 87%, because 27 this is different, this is a mortgage company, but 28 18% retailing -- we show this 18% -- in other words 29 it seems to me, I don't know, I may be wrong, that 30 the Committee is trying to curtail retail credit.

1 THE CHAIRMAN: No, no, we are not
2 doing any such thing.

3 MR. COLLIS: This is one way of 4 doing it, rather than encouraging it. I'm just 5 thinking out loud -- possibly a ceiling on service 6 charges might be made, rather than just having 7 retailers establish -- you are just defeating what 8 the retailer is trying to build up.

9 MR. LAWRENCE: You mean instead
10 of regulation some active restrictions?

11 MR. COLLIS: As a level, a ceiling
12 level.

13 MR. LAWRENCE: Cilings always become 14 the going rate, don't they? Are you serious? Have 15 you considered this? Are you serious about this?

16 MR. COLLIS: This is my own thoughts,
17 this has nothing to do with the trade.

18 MR. LAWRENCE: Well, I wish you would 19 consider it and come back to us because I would imagine 20 this would be repugnant to most --

21 MR. COLLIS: This might be another
22 hot potatoe, such as store hours.

23 MR. LAWRENCE: I wish you would 24 consider that then and if you are serious come back 25 with your further submission to us. I would doubt 26 very much if that would be agreeable to most of your 27 members though.

28 MR. ROLLING: A variety of things 29 have been investigated perhaps more thoroughly in 30 the U.S.A. than in Canada with regard to consumer

1 charging and some of the references that I will leave 2 certainly have found this very very clearly by 3 authorities who are recognized. This is Professor 4 Robert W. Johnson, Professor of Financial Administration, 5 Graduate School of Business Administration, Michigan
6 State University. Some of his references were used 7 in the recent Senator Douglas hearing on banking and 8 finance in the United States. The subject is covered 9 and covered very thoroughly from practically all 10 aspects and I think you will find this of value in 11 your deliberations.

12 Also a study conducted by the 13 National Retail Merchants Association in the United 14 States and what was revealed with regard to credit 15 costs there in the larger department stores. I think 16 you will find in your deliberations these things of 17 value to your Committee, and perhaps answer some of 18 the questions you are asking.

19 THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Mr.
20 Oliver do you have any questions?

21 MR. OLIVER: Just an observation,
22 Mr. Chairman. You appreciate, of course, that three 23 or four of us were not on this Committee until 24 recently. We haven't had the benefit of the 25 discussions that have gone on heretofore. And with 26 that in mind I would make this observation and 27 surely this is true here this morning. I can't see 28 that this is the particular class that we are after.
29 In listening to the evidence this morning I would 30 think that their charges for services in connection

1 with credit were perhaps as low if not lower than 2 any of the ones that have been before this Committee 3 during the hearings. Now if there is going to be 4 redress and if there is going to be reform and if 5 there is going to be change I think myself, Mr.
6 Chairman, that we have to get the suggestions for 7 change or the agreement for change from organizations 8 such as are here this morning. Now with that 9 thought in mind I am somewhat surprised that my 10 friends wouldn't agree to saying that their service 11 charge is a certain percentage. I mean, whether it 12 is 16 or 18%. And I want to ask you now, is the 13 fear of your members in expressing it in a percentage, 14 is the fear that this would be construed as a straight
15 interest charge -- I mean that it would be confusing 16 to the would-be buyer that 16% was the charge solely 17 for money and was a pure interest charge. Is that 18 the great fear that is in the mind of your members?

19 MR. ROLLING: I think generally,
20 Mr. Oliver, you would be correct in that observation.
21 There are many elements that sometimes enter into 22 a charge and if these things are wrapped into one 23 package and called an interest rate -- anything may 24 happen with the thing.

25 MR. OLIVER: That's just the point
26 that I'm after. If you say that this is an interest
27 charge, as my friend, I think from Peterborough, a 28 moment ago said, if you are going to set this out 29 as 16% interest on this account. Now I can see quite 30 frankly, from the few meetings that I have attended,

1 that that would jeopardize the merchant in selling.
2 I think there is no doubt about that. But if you
3 go into the other field and say that this 16% is a 4 service charge -- I mean it would include interest, 5 it would include your cost of administration and 6 everything else -- now what in the world is wrong 7 with setting out at 16% as the cost of servicing this 8 account for credit purposes, at 16 or 17% or 9 whatever it is, so long as your costs are as low or 10 lower than your competitors? It would seem to me, 11 Mr. Chairman, that if that could be done, that it 12 won't harm you but that it would help you. It would 13 put your competitors at a disadvantage and certainly 14 the consumer, the man who buys your appliances or 15 your refrigerators, he is not going to go to your 16 competitor and get it for less than 16 or 18% because 17 you are as low as anyone in the field, so you have 18 nothing to fear from competition in that field, it 19 seems to me, unless my calculations are all askew, 20 and I don't think they are. I would like to use this 21 organization, Mr. Chairman, as a model and to fear 22 that somebody else is going to compete in that field, 23 why that fear would be removed if every one of your 24 competitors had to state in a like manner in a column 25 that their service charge -- not interest, but their 26 service charge for all the cost of carrying this -- 27 were 16 or 18%. And you have nothing to fear because 28 you are in the lower bracket. And I again come back 29 to what I said at the start, Mr. Chairman, that if we 30 are going to move in the direction that many of us feel

1 we should move, then I think we should have the 2 support of this group, who are doing an admirable
3 job in that field now and at a rate or at a level 4 that is as low or lower than their competitors.
5 Really they have nothing to fear in doing that.

6 THE CHAIRMAN: I think what these 7 gentlemen are fearful of is the psychological 8 effect of showing the percentage first of all and 9 secondly if you had to show the percentage charge
10 some of the competitors might bury this or inflate 11 the price of the goods so that it wouldn't be shown 12 as a percentage, it would be hidden in other words.
13 So that there are problems here.

14 MR. LAWRENCE: But their own brief
15 rectified that by saying that the cash price should 16 be set out too in a statement. If this is so all 17 you have to do is go around the corner and see --

18 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, I know but you 19 can shop and shop. One man says 110 and he is 20 concealing half the interest and the other man says 21 100 so he is down to 16%. The 110 man says in big 22 letters "Our service charge is only 5%". I'm afraid 23 that would be the thing that would attract people 24 and they would forget or not know --

25 MR. MACDONALD: The logic of your 26 argument though, Mr. Chairman, is that we just can't 27 do anything about the present situation. It gets 28 back to the basic point of whether or not you would 29 drive underground back into the original retail price.

30 MR. SEDGWICK: I was only expressing

1 the view that I think the magic of an interest rate
2 is confusing. Interest is the value of money borrowed
3 and when you complicate that factor by adding to it 4 services and other things and you express it as 5 a percentage, the average consumer thinks of it 6 as interest although you don't describe it as such 7 and it is confusing.

8 MR. WHITE: Well I would like to 9 make one or two comments on this general problem 10 in part to interpret the sentiments of business to 11 members of the Committee who may not be experienced 12 in that line of undertaking and in part to explain 13 our function to these gentlemen who are representing 14 all this. I think the basic resistance from business-15 men to legislation like we are talking about is 16 because they fear any change. Most businessmen are 17 making some kind of a profit. They are reluctant 18 to see changes from government that may make their 19 task more difficult or which may interfere with 20 legitimate profit-making undertakings. I think 21 that businessmen are quite right in not wanting 22 any further encroachment of government. Their lives
23 are difficult enough already because of the competition
24 of the marketplace. And if I were these gentlemen
25 here I would not care to see a lot more government 26 regulations imposed on their orderly business
27 enterprises. I wouldn't want to see another government 28 inspector leaning over my shoulder to make sure that 29 I was dealing properly and all the rest of it. I 30 am in full sympathy with the point of view you express.

1 Now if we legislators have -- and 2 by the way I would like to mention to you in case
3 you don't know it, that eight of the twelve members 4 at this table are businessmen and so we are not 5 going to be in a hurry to put you fellows out of 6 business. Now we have got a dual responsibility 7 here. We want to protect the legitimate aspirations 8 of the business community and we want to protect 9 the consumer from that small unscrupulous group of 10 businessmen.

11 We have had two or three dozen
12 suggestions. You chaps that were here yesterday 13 or the day before will know that it was suggested 14 that the right of repossession be restricted to 15 what is sold on the contract and that a company 16 having a chattel mortgage on furniture and the man's 17 household or something like that not be permitted.
18 There isn't a lot of debate at the table about that 19 because we all understand that suggestion and in 20 the closing days of the Committee we will decide 21 whether or not we think it's desirable. All the 22 discussions, or most of the discussions, revolve
23 around this idea of disclosure of interest rates 24 because we have to determine first of all if it is 25 feasible and in seeking out the truth of this aspect 26 of the problem we are asking a tough question. The 27 hatful that represent business interests are sometimes 28 reluctant to give full and frank answers and the 29 hard driving questions that come from this side of the 30 table don't represent an antipathy towards business

1 so much as a determination to arrive at the truth
2 concerning the feasibility.

3 When we decide that question we 4 have to turn to the matter of desirability and 5 comments such as those that you have made will 6 certainly weight very heavily when those deliberations 7 take place.

8 I think that the small businessmen
9 are the heart of Canadian free enterprise. They 10 are the economic risk takers, they are the economic 11 innovators, they are the outstanding citizens in 12 any community and I would be very disappointed if you 13 took back with you any misunderstanding about our 14 intent or purpose. We are very sympathetic towards 15 your cause and we will not ride roughshod over you 16 in seeking to protect the consumers of Ontario.

17 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Edwards?

18 MR. EDWARDS: Well Mr. Chairman,
19 I think Mr. White has expressed the feelings I have 20 with regard to this Committee. I have been in the 21 retail business myself for some 30 years in the drug 22 business. I must say I have very little credit 23 business, we don't seem to have it any more like we 24 used to have. People seem to have more money as 25 far as that's concerned. Business has been good.
26 But I do think Mr. White has expressed my feelings.

27 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Letherby?

28 MR. LETHERBY: Mr. White has wrapped
29 up my thoughts in all matters so there is nothing 30 I can add.

1 MR. REILLY: I wouldn't think, Mr.
2 White, that the businessman is afraid of making 3 change. There isn't any fear in their hearts about 4 making changes, they are making changes daily, those 5 businessmen who are aggressive are constantly alert
6 to making necessary changes, but I would ask Mr.
7 Rolling specifically what is your connection with 8 the Retail Merchants Association?

9 MR. ROLLING: I'm General Manager
10 in Ontario.

11 MR. REILLY: So you are General
12 Manager of Ontario. Just to get it clear in my 13 own mind, you have 4,000 members in Ontario. Do 14 they pay a fee or does it depend upon the size 15 of the organization or the number of employees as 16 to what fee they pay to belong to your organization?

17 MR. ROLLING: It is not graduated,
18 Mr. Reilly. There is an annual fee for membership 19 and we provide some services (rest of sentence 20 inaudible)

21 MR. REILLY: There are 60,000
22 retail merchants of which you made mention earlier -- 23 are they in Ontario?

24 MR. ROLLING: They would be across 25 Canada.

26 MR. REILLY: Because when you
27 referred to the 180,000 across Canada, I wondered 28 which 60,000 were the retailers.

29 MR. ROLLING: Well, Mr. Reilly, a 30 number, a great number of the listed retail establish-

1 ments would take in the sale of alcoholic beverages,
2 motor vehicles -- I've listed some of them here -- 3 restaurants, they would have to be divorced, but they 4 are classified generally as retail (rest of sentence
5 inaudible)

6 Our membership fluctuates because 7 everyone is not due at a certain date of the year, 8 maybe the first of January, they may not be due til 9 the date they joined today at this time next year, 10 therefore we always have a fluctuating total. And 11 we have members who are members for three or four 12 years and this year they are not members. They 13 seem to consider once a member always a member.
14 This is the independent retailer.

15 MR. REILLY: Your colleague, Mr. More,
16 indicated that perhaps one in ten came in and asked 17 about the percentage of the rate of interest and I
18 think that Mr. Boys indicated that maybe one in 20.
19 Have you got some idea of how the average is -- are 20 more of your members interested from the standpoint 21 of a dollar interest cost or from the standpoint 22 of percentage of interest?

23 MR. MORE: We have already indicated, 24 sir, that it was the dollar.

25 MR. REILLY: I know what you did
26 and I know what Mr. Boys did, I was asking Mr. Rolling 27 from the standpoint of the entire membership would 28 he have any idea?

29 MR. ROLLING: As to that we haven't 30 conducted a survey on that particular point but that

1 is the general feeling that dollars and cents is 2 much more easily handled.

3 MR. REILLY: Would Mr. Boys care
4 to tell us about what happens in a case where it 5 went beyond 24 months? He has said that he never 6 accepts any contract beyond 24 months. What happens 7 when it does go beyond 24 months.

8 MR. BOYS: I accept perhaps one a 9 year, that's all.

10 MR. REILLY: Do you change your 11 rate of interest when it exceeds a period of 24 months?

12 MR. BOYS: No, it is still 9% on 13 the unpaid balance though I caution them if it is 14 at all possible I would like them to pay it off 15 within 24 months and I write very few contracts that 16 way. That is not a problem, going over the 24 months.

17 MR. REILLY: The only thing I would 18 say to Mr. Oliver, Mr. Chairman, in connection with 19 disclosing a fee after this nature is you would have 20 to, it would be imperative to have some understanding 21 or some control from the standpoint of our banking 22 rates and what would be expressed as bank interest 23 if we were going to show or ask these people to 24 reveal these rates as 14 or 16 or something else.

25 MR. LAWRENCE: You mean it would 26 drive them all to the banks to get credit?

27 MR. REILLY: Well, you see, the 28 banks at the present time, I understand, doesn't 29 come under our jurisdiction and it has a 6% rate, 30 and if the 6% rate is tantamount to 11.4 on a declining

1 balance then I think we would have to ask the 2 cooperation of the banks to reveal this rate as 11.4 3 if we are going to be fair to the retail merchants.

4 MR.ROLLING: The suggestion has 5 already been made to the Committee at a joint meeting.

6 MR. REILLY: And the other obser-
7 vation in connection with it, I think, Mr. Chairman, 8 is simply this -- the effect has been pointed out 9 from the standpoint of the effect on the economy and 10 from the standpoint of the effect on employment. I 11 think that when the retailers make it possible for 12 people to purchase refrigerators and stoves and 13 all that there are countless hundreds and thousands 14 of units that are being produced that otherwise would 15 not be produced if he didn't have a credit system.
16 And this is something that we must not lose sight of.

17 MR. ROLLING: We as a national 18 association have made the recommendation for some 19 cases in the Banking Act to give a little more 20 elasticity to the banks in their dealings at the 21 retail level. That is the retailers level that 22 purely involves credit. Some of these recommendations 23 have already been embodied in the findings of the 24 Royal Commission and the recommendations are now made 25 at the federal level. This of course is agreed to 26 generally by the banking community too. I think perhaps 27 that this may take some time to accomplish, but it 28 is in the recommendations of the Royal Commission on 29 Taxation, some of which was made by ourselves.

30 THE CHAIRMAN: Are you completed, Mr.

1 Reilly?

2 MR. REILLY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

3 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Irwin?

4 MR. IRWIN: Mr. Chairman, I just 5 wanted to correct the record there, or the impression 6 in the record in regard to two comments that have 7 been made. Mr. MacDonald, in regard to your 8 calculations I think you would want it placed on 9 the record that while taking the interpretation 10 of the effect of the interest in the way you had 11 calculated it, if done that way the facts would 12 appear to be correct, but where you have a blended
13 payment -- if I understand the terms of the contract 14 it was $750.00 borrowed for a period of 60 months.
15 The effective rate over the entire term of the 16 contract is only about 14%. I don't think it is 17 correct to leave that impression.

18 The second impression I would like 19 to put straight. I have no obsession about disclosing 20 interest. Statements are made in connection with 21 the technical problems involved with declaring an 22 interest rate. I think I have to make it clear 23 that it can be done. Nothing in the record states, 24 since I have sat on the Committee, indicates that I
25 have said it should be done. I'm not saying it 26 should be done.

27 MR. REILLY: You will agree that you
28 are a little closer to the picture than the average 29 carpenter or electrician or consumer?

30 MR. IRWIN: And the third point is

1 merely in the form of a question directed to the 2 gentlemen is -- I agree the economic implications of 3 disclosure are very, very important. I feel that 4 there are two economic possibilities. I have no
5 means at the moment of evaluating them. It's 6 possible that such disclosure could change the 7 pattern of lending or extending credit and therefore 8 might encourage certain institutions and discourage 9 others. It might discourage retail buying. I don't 10 know. That's sort of an adjustment of the economy.
11 The second effect would perhaps be an overall one, 12 that it might have a discouraging effect on buying 13 generally, like Mr. Reilly is suggesting. But 14 the important thing about these two things is that 15 while they seem to me to be of fundamental importance 16 to this discussion, nobody has attempted to give 17 us any evaluation of this and this might be something 18 that you might consider. People make the suggestion 19 that there would be very deleterious effects on the 20 economy and on buying but nobody has attempted to 21 evaluate to what extent.

22 MR. ROLLING: This is an assumption,
23 Mr. Irwin, that it would because it is a change in 24 pattern. I think it would be quite difficult to 25 evaluate what was going to happen when one is not 26 in a position to first of all evaluate what was 27 going to be, if anything, brought forth in the form 28 of regulations. I would like to say this to the 29 Committee and the Chairman, that we as the Retail 30 Merchants Association of Canada (Ontario) would be

1 most happy to act as a sounding board to assist the 2 Committee in future deliberations or in consultations
3 and put our facilities completely at your disposal.

4 MR. MACDONALD: Mr. Chairman, I just 5 want to make a comment by way of a personal comment 6 on this. Undoubtedly you are going to thank these 7 gentlemen as you always do in your gracious way, 8 but I want to especially thank them because they 9 have come here accepting basically the Retail
10 Council's brief but at least you have been openminded 11 and you presented your reactions to the thing and 12 you say now you are willing to be a sounding 13 board. And I know of no better sounding board in 14 terms of a group that is not the real fault and 15 for whom we don't want to create unnecessary 16 difficulties, but we, as you see, are being driven 17 to try and find a yardstick. And if you will work 18 with us in trying to find a yardstick that doesn't 19 complicate your lives -- you are not the real problem
20 -- I must say that I had the feeling the last couple 21 of days that there was an awful lot to be hidden 22 and an effort to keep it hidden. But this hasn't 23 been the case in your instance.. In other words this 24 openmindedness, I think, is going to help us find 25 the solution.

26 THE CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, I can't 27 add anything to that. We do appreciate what you 28 have said to the Committee and I am sure it will be 29 of much help to us and you have been very frank with 30 us and quite open in your answers and that, too, is

1 very refreshing. Anything else? Then this meeting
2 is adjourned.

3 MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, before
4 you adjourn the meeting -- I missed the beginning -- 5 you don't intend to reconvene this afternoon?

6 THE CHAIRMAN: No.

7 MR. LAWRENCE: I believe you have 8 indicated that we are not going to sit until October?

9 THE CHAIRMAN: If Mr. Sedgwick will 10 wait -- he is leaving shortly for England and he is 11 going to look into the English legislation, as you 12 know. There would be very little we could do in 13 September so we are not planning to have any meetings
14 in September but we will have in Ottawa in October 15 and probably three meetings.

16 MR. LAWRENCE: I was wondering in 17 the interval -- I mean there is going to be a two 18 months gap -- if we couldn't have some statistical 19 work done for us, and in spite of Mr. Sedgwick's 20 absence I think really it is about time, past time 21 quite frankly, that we should have some comparative 22 legislation.

23 MR. REILLY: Your last statement
24 I didn't get.

25 MR. LAWRENCE: We should have some 26 comparative legislation before us so that when a 27 group comes in we can say, "Well, North Dakota has 28 such and such legislation, or Saskatchewan or 29 Manitoba or Mahatma Ghandi or somebody has got 30 something down here, what do you people say about this?"

1 I mean there is a lot of jurisdiction at the moment
2 and I think we should have this before us before
3 we go any further. We have a two months gap here.
4 As these groups come before us as well I think it is 5 rather unfair that we have to ask the Council for 6 the retail credit --

7 THE CHAIRMAN: We did cover that 8 at the very beginning of our meetings. We had the 9 Attorney General's representative here.

10 MR. MACDONALD: Well Mr. Chairman,
11 if our Secretary -- before Mr. Sedgwick leaves 12 perhaps some preliminaries could be done in terms 13 of the material that is available here now.

14 MR. SEDGWICK: We did have -- it's 15 a very old study of comparative legislation.

16 MR. LAWRENCE: I vaguely remember 17 that. I don't remember North Dakota coming into the 18 thing.

19 MR. SEDGWICK: Oh, no, North Dakota
20 didn't.

21 MR. LAWRENCE: As a matter of fact
22 I think we had two paragraphs, one relating to certain 23 intended legislation in Alberta and other legislation
24 that has never been proclaimed in Manitoba. Other 25 than that I don't think we have had anything. Right 26 next door in Quebec there is some very important 27 legislation. I don't think we --

28 MR. REILLY: That was covered. As 29 a matter of fact wasn't it Mr. McKenzie who covered 30 that thoroughly.

1 MR. SEDGWICK: We had the ()
2 before us. Certainly we didn't have everything
3 of the 50 States of the Union.

4 MR. LAWRENCE: I mean a lot of 5 work has been done in the two years that we started, 6 or whenever it was that we did start.

7 THE CHAIRMAN: Well, we can be 8 working on that and Mr. Harcourt and our staff 9 will be working on that, in getting that information 10 and making it available to us. Then we will have 11 Mr. Sedgwick's report on English legislation when 12 he comes back.

13 MR. SEDGWICK: I don't know of 14 a central bureau in the States.

15 MR. LAWRENCE: I think the AG's
16 Department have done a lot more work on it since 17 we started.

18 THE CHAIRMAN: We can bring that 19 up to date and be working on that during the month 20 of September. It doesn't look at the moment as 21 if we can do any other useful work.

22 MR. MACDONALD: Mr. Chairman, are 23 you contemplating getting at this door to door thing
24 following Mr. Sedgwick's report?

25 THE CHAIRMAN: Yes.

26 MR. MACDONALD: Presumably in 27 November, if we are going to Ottawa in October.
28 Because I have a number of cases -- I could discuss 29 them in detail with the Secretary or our Counsel, 30 that I think, which have been brought to my attention,

1 and undoubtedly all the other members of the 2 Committee have them, and I think they are good 3 illustrations of it, related to one or two of the 4 finance companies which apparently deal in some 5 of what has come to be described as hot paper.
6 And to explore this whole area and part of the door 7 to door selling and come to some conclusions on 8 what legislation could be passed here. But presumably 9 we will have October in terms of lining that up.

10 MR. SEDGWICK: Mr. MacDonald, I feel 11 that the one remaining field that is of great 12 importance is this door to door selling that we 13 haven't touched on at all.

14 THE CHAIRMAN: A further investigation
15 into this --

16 MR. LAWRENCE: Would it therefore 17 be your intention, Mr. Chairman, that we should make 18 a final report to the Legislature at this session?

19 THE CHAIRMAN: Well if it's possible
20 for us to complete and the Committee feels that we 21 have completed our investigation by the end of the 22 year then we should consider giving a final report.
23 We have covered, I think, the ground quite extensively, 24 except for these one or two areas that seem to need 25 to be investigated.

26 Any other comments? Then we will 27 adjourn then until October.
